Aldo Moro Is Kidnapped, 5 Slain; Red Brigades Want Release of 15

ROME, March 16 (NYT).-Aldo Moro, one of Italy's most influential politicians, was kidnapped this morning by leftist urban guerrillas who killed all his bodyguards in a bloody street ambush.

In a series of messages tele phoned to news agencies, the Red Brigades, who have killed or maimed dozens of Italians in recent years, said they had "attacked the heart of the state" by seizing Mr. Moro, 61. Unless 15 brigade leaders now on trial in Turin were freed within 48 hours. the message said, the hostage would be "finished off."

A tenacious, low-key, meticulous politician with a gift for holding together fractions coalitions, Moro has served five times as Italy's premier. In October, 1976, he was elected leader of the Christian Democratic party, which has dominated politics here for 30 years, and he was considered the favorite to succeed Giomi Leone as president when Mr. Leone's term ends in Dethis isn't war, what is?" Last year, there were 78 kidnaurings in Italy, according to cificial figures, and so far this year there have been 13. But most of the violins have been wealtha businessmen. Until today, the most diamatic political kidnapping had been the seizure of the gan of Guido de Martino, prelident of the Socialist party last year in Naples.

Political Motive

By striking at Mr. Moro-certainly one of this country's five most important politicians, and, in the view of some, its mast important—the Red Brigades apparently hoped to make a polititheir conrades.

The brigades resent the willinguers of the traditional left, especially the Communists, to co-operate in Republican government. And it was Mr. Moro who persuaded the right wing of his party to accept the formula under which the Communists, for the first time in 30 years, constitute a formal part of the parliamen tary majority. This agreement ended a gov ernmental crisis that began on Jan. 16 and produced the government sworn in yesterday. Even though the Communists gained no Cabinet positions, it was a clear step toward their goal of sharing governmental po-

The Red Brigades trial at Turin has been postponed until Monday. The Moro kidnapping

The attack on Mr. Moro was obviously planned like a major military operation. Stolen Car Used

Mr. Moro left a local church at 9 a.m. after attending mass, sitting in the left rear seat of a government car with a driver and a bodyguard in the front seat. A car containing three carabinieri, or paramilitary pol-ice, followed close behind.

As it turned into a narrow road leading out of the luxurious residential neighborhood, Mr. Moro's automobile was blocked by another car, stolen earlier in the week from the Venezuelan Embassy. Inside were several gunmen. The bodyguards' vehicle ran into Mr. Moro's as a group of terrorists dressed in airline uniforms jumped out from behind some bushes outside a café. Luciano Infeliai, the solicitor general, who is heading the investigation, quoted witnesses as reporting that 12 guerrillas were involved-11 men and one woman. The woman was described as about 25.

5 Guards Killed

Using automatic weapons, including a Czechoslovak weapon and what the police described as an "unusual" Soviet machine gun, the terrorists shot all five of the persons accompanying Mr. Moro. Four died instantly and the fifth died in a hospital. The (Continued on Page 2. Col. 6)

The extreme-left terror group was founded in 1969 and first announced its existence in 1970 by firehombing an electronics firm in Milan, leaving behind the first of its now familiar leaflets bearing a ringed, fivepointed star symbol.

The police now hold it responsible for the vast majority of political terrorist stacks, which reached a record level of 2,080 last year.

In the most serious of those attacks. 25 magistrates, lawyers, colicemen and a journalist have been killed and scores of executives and leading citizens have been wounded.

The Red Brigades leaped to prominence on April 18, 1974, when they abducted a Genos magistrate, Mario Sossi, and demanded the release of eight imprisoned comrades in exchange for his life.

The Genos prosecutor, Francesoo Coco, ordered the release of the men, the Red Brigades released Mr. Sossi unharmed after five weeks and the Rome Appeals Court promptly canceled the release order.

1978 Seal-Slaughter Protest Has Less Impact

By Charles T. Powers

ST. ANTHONY, Newfoundland, March 16.—The coming of March marks the start of the sealing season—first for the harp seal, arriving to whelp on the Arctic ice floes moving down from the waters off Greenland, and then later, farther north and east, for the hood seal.

But in recent years, March also has been a season of confrontation and protest here.

The protests have been mounted by various animal welfare and ecology groups that object to the. killing of the roly-poly, white-furred, harp seal pup. Usually, the pups are slaughtered between 1 and 18 days after they are

The protest has returned to this town of about 3,000 persons at the tip of Newfounland's great northern peninsula. It is led ty the Greenpeace Foundation, a San Francisco-based organization concerned with environmental issues. Tame Protest

In contrast to past seasons, the protest seems to have lost much of its steam. There are fewer activists and they are not as well organized as before.

Last year, French actress Brigitte Bardot visited the scene and protesters, on the treacherous ice floes where the seal hunt goes on, attempted to stop the sealers and the sealing vessels nosing into the massive shelves of ice.

One demonstrator chained himself to a load of seal pelts ready to be hauled aboard one of the els, and almost drowned when seamen hoisted the load and dumped him into the frigid North Atlantic waters.

It was last year's circus-like atmosphere that led to most of the difficulties encountered this sesson by Greenpeace. The Canadian Fisheries Department placed strict controls over the group's access to the hunt this

When the hunt began this week, Canadian officials allowed the leader of the Greenneace effort here. Patrick Moore, and two U.S. congressmen-Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt.--to visit the ment minister, who has signed scene. They were accompanying actress Pamela Martin, who had obtained a permit.

The hunt began without interference. Reps. Ryan and Jeffords and the Greenpeace deleestion flew to the ice in a rented helicopter. At one point, Rep. Ryan lay down beside one of the seal pups and smiled as photographers took pictures.

Both politicians seemed surprised at the depth of feeling among the flercely independent Newfoundlanders over the senihunting issue. One of the men the congressmen encountered on the ice was John Lundrigan, Newfoundland's rural develop-

House Protests Hunt

WASHINGTON, March 16 (Reuters) --- A House resolution called on Canada yesterday to end harp seal hunts.

The resolution states: "Because the killing of newborn harp seals in Canadian waters is a cruel practice which may cause the extinction of that species of seal, the government of Canada is strongly urged to reassess its present policy of permitting such inhuman killing in Canadian waters."

This year's quota of baby seals to be killed is 180,000.

Scientist Blames Concorde For 'Superbooms' Over U.S.

WASHINGTON, March 16 (IHT).—Transportation Secretary Brock Adams yesterday ordered an investigation into a scientist's theory that mysterious lights and loud noises off the U.S. east coast were caused by the Concorde supersonic airliner.

Seoul Embassy Shut By Israel as Economy

SEOUL, March 16 (Reuters),... Israel will close its embassy in Seoul April 1 for financial reasons and will handle matters related to South Korea through its embassy in Tokyo, an Israeli spokesman announced yesterday. which attributed most of the booms to an atmospheric effect caused by extremely cold weather in combination with sonic booms of military aircraft.

The Navy laboratory suggested a possible link of the Nova Scotin booms with Concorde flights, but it concluded that noises farther down the coast were sonic booms from military aircraft training off shore.

Dr. Stone said that some of the booms may have been caused that way, but that most of them were in accord with the times when Concordes flying between Europe and Kennedy Airport in New York turned toward their descent path south of Cape Sable, Nova Scotia. He said further that the booms had not been widely observed until after Nov. 22, when Kennedy Airport was opened to regular Concorde

Dr. Stone believes that when supersonic planes turn a corner, the shock wave generated on one course joins that from the new course to produce a "superboom," which he said, could be heard hundreds of miles away. Mr. Adams said that the investigation would have no effect on current U.S. government monitoring and review of British Airways and Air France Concorde operations in the United States.

Amnesty Claims Dead S. African Had Been Beaten

LONDON, March 16 (AP).-A 26-year-old South African dentist found hanged in his cell last August was probably "severely assaulted" by security police prior to his death, Amnesty International said today.

"Once again, as in the case of Steve Biko and all other detainees who have died in detention, all the evidence suggests that a po-litical detainee had been severely assaulted shortly before he was hanged," the London-based human rights organization said.

An inquest into the death of Dr. Hoosen Haffejee concluded yesterday that he died from hanging but declined to return a verdict of suicide. The magistrate said that evidence was not sufficient to attribute Dr. Haffejee's death to any individual but that security police had not satisfactorily explained the wounds on his body, Amnesty reported.

Amnesty called for an immediate investigation into Dr. Haffejee's treatment in detention. Photographs taken in November showed extensive wounds and hrulses on his scalp, back and around his knees, elbows and ankle joints. According to autopsy evidence given at the inquest, Dr. Haffejee suffered these injuries 4 to 12 hours before his death, Amnesty

Progress Noted At Geneva Over Full A-Test Ban

GENEVA, March 16 (Reuters). The United States, the Soviet Union and Britain announced today that they have made substantial progress in eight months of negotiations on a ban of all tests of nuclear weapons.

"A number of important points have already been agreed, and on some outstanding issues the differences between the positions of the participants have narrow-ed," the three nuclear powers redisarmament conference.

They are drafting a treaty witch would ban underground nuclear tests, in addition to blasts in the atmosphere, outer space and under water, which are already outlawed by a 1963 agree-

Gorky's Conflict Locked in Time

DARIS, March 16 (IHT). Maxim Gorky's "Les Derniers" has been resurrected at the Thestre de la Ville, obviously for its political implications rather than for its old-fashioned realism. Gorky's best play-as every chauffeur of culture allows-is "The Lower Depths," a "must" on any sightseeing tour of 20th-century drama. As a monnment it is as dnescanable as the Eiffel Tower. When acted by the Moscow Art Company, it is a great play, and even undertaken by lesser players it survives. Before it, Gorky had written only one play, "The Smug Citizens," a ramshackle job, but with the success of his subsequent masterpiece he became a prolific playwright.

nospired by Chekhov's triumph as a dramatist, almost every author in Russia took to playwriting. Among Gorky's con-temporaries who suddenly feit that the play was the thing were the poets and novelists Andreyev, Blok, Artzibashev, Sologub, Merezhovsky, Zinaida Hippius, Averchenjo, Annenkov, Kuzmin and Remizov. While Chaliapin and the Diaghilev ballets were exhib-iting the Russian performing arts abroad, a theatrical renaissance flowered at home.

"13 à Table" and "Homard à l'Américaine" have all been hits. Perhaps it is on this chance that "Le Coo en Pate" by Maurice Abrial (at the Theatre Saint-Georges) is banking; it has little else that is likely to please. An undernourished boulevard farce about a suspicious, money-loving wife and her wayward husband who wins a fortune in a lottery which halts her plans to leave him, it is a fumbling imitation of countless comedies of the genre, feeble in its writing, its character delineation and its humor. Laurence Badie. Pierre Hatet, Mirelle Audibert, Pierre Vernier, Angelo Bardi and Christian Van Cay are the poor players involved.

Terry Hands's production of "Twelfth Night"—in Jean-Louis Curtis's adeptation of 'La Nuit des Rois"-has returned for a brief engagement at the Théatre National de Chaillot. It is one of the best French productions of Shakespeare in recent years, notable for Pierre Dux's splendid Malvolio and Ludmila Mikael's sparkling Viola.

The French Voter Flinches

The narrow defeat of the left in the French parliamentary election appears to have had a double cause: mistrust of the promises of Eurocommunism and fear of the social transformations pledged by the Socialist-Communist alliance. Next Sunday's runoff will determine the distribution of seats in the National Assembly, but barring some unexpected development, the center-right government formed by President Giscard d'Estaing and the Gaullists will get a new lease on life. The left parties' agreement to support each other's strongest candidate in the district runoffs is likely only to prevent

The main losers so far are not the Communists, who held their one-fifth of the electorate, but François Mitterrand and his Socialists. Their strategy for bringing the left to power with the aid of Communist votes is what the balloting chiefly repudiates —perhaps for a long time. The Socialists gained ground, but far less than predicted.

Right to the end, the public opinion polls showed the combined left ahead, as they had for more than a year. The polls may have been wrong, but more likely, in the end, the marginal voter flinched. He protested in polls and local elections, but would not vote

Communists into cabinet posts-not with all the risks that entails for the economic and political future of France, the European Community and North Atlantic Alliance. So the French electorate, despite the pressure of economic depression, was left where it has been for many years: eager for a change after two decades of center-right rule but not so great a change as the Socialists and Communists offered.

The Socialists had to settle for 22.59 per cent, well short of what they needed for 2 majority including the Communists' 20.6 per cent. The Gaullists fost ground, but remain the largest party with 22.62 per cent. The Giscardists did well with 21.5 per cent, but probably not well enough to advance the French President's desire to move toward a center-left coalition with the Socialists, excluding the Communists and right-wing Gaullists. Economic recovery and a bigger Giscardist bloc could yet point the way for that more moderate leftward swing in France. But Mr. Mitterrand's ambition to seek the presidency again, with Communist support, will rule that out before 1981-unless the current election forces a change in Socialist strategy.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Israel Poses a Test

By sending troops into southern Lebanon, Israel has asked the world, and particularly the Arab world, to give it some assurance that terrorists will not be left free along the border to prey upon its vulnerable population. It is a fair request, particularly after Yasser Arafat took pride in the brutal assault on Israeli civilians last weekend and promised more of the same.

The problem is that there exists no easy answer. The Lebanese government, by its own admission, cannot control the guerrilla forces based among its 400,000 Palestinians. Syria, having publicly supported the terrorism, could not be trusted to control them. The Palestinian extremists are probably in disfavor in all the Arab nations that border on Israel, but their cause has nonetheless been enshrined in Arab politics and diplomacy. If they are to be prevented from sabotaging the current negotiations—and they have once again begun the job well—the Arab nations must help Israel find some safety or else let Israelis patrol the five-mile-deep danger zone of Lebanon as they now threaten to do indefinitely.

It is all discouraging, of course, it is also horrible. Now mothers weep over maimed children on both sides of the Israel-Lebanon frontier, and shout for revenge. Onlookers ure the istren response against the Fatah provocation and wonder whether the Israelis fired too randomly from the air and why they were not content to capture guerrilla bases on the ground. Some will say the Israelis share responsibility for the Palestinian hatreds and for inflaming them yet again. The Egyptians, who wisely condemned the Fatah attack, will ask not to have their own peace overtures tangled in the forthcoming Lebanon negotiations. The United States, after dutifully refraining from criticism of the Isnaeli counterstrike, will ask Mr. Begin to put concern for peace with Egypt in the south ahead of the quest for security in the

Whatever the merit of these views and requests, the fact remains that it is Israel that is being asked to trust in new arrangements for its security, to relinquish territory that has been a psychological buffer for its people and to envision a time when it will surrender military control over hundreds of thousands of Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza. The Arabs who have been trumpeting Israel's vulnerability this week and yet will not take measures that would relieve Israeli anxieties cannot have it both ways. Only by showing that they understand Israel's need for elementary security can they logically promise peace on the return of lost territory. The negotiations for an Israeli retreat from Leb-

Eurocommunists in Waiting

In France, Sunday's first round of voting for a new National Assembly gave the Socialist-led left a slight lead over the center-right government coalition, but possibly not enough to carry the day in the second round next weekend. In Italy, a twomonth crisis has ended with the formation of practically the same Cabinet under Christian Democrat Giulio Andreotti, the difference being that the Communists now will be an official part of the parliamentary majority while still heading no ministries.

The disappointment of Eurocommunist aspirations is much to be desired wherever the threat has arisen. Some obvious dangers from important Communist participation in Western governments still apply despite Eurocommunist declarations of independence from Moscow. The Communists of any nationality are at best uncertainly devoted to democracy and the Western alliance, and their accession would mean economic panic. If Italy and France can hold off that day until their moderate politicians can rule out the possibility entirely, the present period of wavering uncertainty will have been worth while.

—From The Washington Star.

The French Election

Frenchmen have a habit of voting more conservatively in the second round of their complicated parliamentary election system than in the first. But even if the rule holds true in second-round balloting next Sunday, and Communists do not move into the Cabinet after all, the outlook is for a prolonged period of economic and political instability in France.

The results of first-round voting last Sunday were a deep disappointment to the left. The polls had indicated that the Socialists.

Communists and closely allied splinter parties would get about 54 per cent of the vote more than enough to gain control of the National Assembly.

When the votes were counted, however, the parties of the left had only 48.4 per centand even that figure includes the 3.3 per cent of the vote collected by a small extremist party that, in practice, rarely works with the Socialists and Communists.

The unusually heavy voter turnout suggests that fear of Communist power-sharing was a big factor in the outcome. Another element was the confusion sown by the Communist leadership's fratricidal sniping at the Socialists before the election.

The truth seems to be that France will face serious problems even if the left is defeated and the present governing coalition remains in power.

The Communist and Socialist trade unions are in a rebellious mood, and may well set off a series of disruptive strikes and political

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing recognizes that genuine social injustices exist; he would like to inaugurate a program of reforms under his banner of "Change With Continuity." But his freedom to do so is limited by the need to control inflation, and by the resistance of the Gaullists.

In short, the prospect is for a victory for the ruling center-right coalition -but that coalition itself is too divided to provide clear, decisive leadership in meeting France's social and economic problems.

France thus faces a period of troublesome instability, no matter who wins the secondround voting Sunday. It's fair to say, however, that the problems will be more manageable if the Communists are kept out of the government.

WARHINGTON, - Hawks hope that the hard time they have given the administration on the Panama Canal treaties will build a barrier against early conclusion of a new arms-control agreement with the Soviet Union. But they are wrong. In a series of recent White House meetings, President Carter has decided to go strong and fast for a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty -SALT-2-to replace the agreement that expired last fall.

Three considerations have proved decisive in the President's mind. First, it is clear that there is no intrinsic linkage between Panama and SALT; it is not a matter of apples and oranges, it's more like grapefruit and peanut Panama centers around a vestige of the colonial past. The canal has diminishing strategic and commercial importance. It is of vital interest only to a tiny country that does not pose, and can never pose, a threat to the United States.

SALT, however, is central to this country's relations with the Soviet Union. A second SALT accord will keep the door open for further limitation of arms and for more cooperation in the political

Standoff

The White House calculates that if there is no agreement. the strategic arms budgets for the Sovlet Union and the United States will each rise by one-third without either side attaining a significant advantage. A painfully established system of monitoring, consultation and verification would go by the boards. The visible aging of President Leonid Brezhnev and uncertainty regarding his successor put an added premium on getting an agreement

WASHINGTON -The recent flurry of discussion by officials and others of the merits of "linkage" in the conduct of U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union has frequently tended to obscure the issues involved. This is unfortunately what happens all too often when we debate the slogans rather than the substance of

The word "linkage," like its close relative, "détente," came utros di sonairen tion with U.S.-Soviet relations in the early years of the Nixon administration. The term again like détente, was not one that leading figures in that administration preferred or originated in describing the purposes and content of our policies toward the Soviet Union. It came to be convenient shorthand in public discourse: in the process important distinctions were lost. Broadly, one can think of linkage in two ways. The first is the essentially tactical one of relating two or more issues in negotiations or the management of some crisis, and trying to use them as trade-offs or to exert pressure for a desired outcome. This is the notion that has drawn the most attention as well as controversy. Its history as a technique for conducting policy is at best ambiguous. It is, mistakenly, cited as the essence of the Nixon-Kissinger approach on policy toward the Soviet Union. In fact, however, there is a much more fundamental strategic sense of the term that represents more accurately the perceptions and approaches that

It was on this besis that the Nixon administration sought to develop U.S.-Soviet relations on a "broad front" rather than hrough compartmentalized negotiations on individual issues on which some convergence or parallelism of interests was thought to exist. It resisted early pressures for a summit meeting and for quick initiation of Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (which incidentally, had been scheduled for the summer of 1968 but were suspended because of the Soviet-

Instances of this occurred in the Middle East, South Asia, Cuba and elsewhere. Many of the policies involved mented, especially as the presidency went into decline after 1972. Nevertheless, an integral approach, reflecting the interconnections of reality, retained its validity and it still gives the best promise of creating the stakes for a relationship in which competition is tempered with restraint. But, of course, it requires persistence and continuity. And it requires an understanding by the government and the public alike that occasional quick foxes, dramatic initiatives or skillful tactics may produce an agreement here, a gain there and a satisfactorily managed crisis somewhere else, but do not necessarily represent coherent policy that advances our interests over the long term.

Of the U.S. And the Shah

The President

By William Buckley Jr.

NEW YORK—Six weeks in Europe, where necessarily much of the talk is about the declining dollar, suggests the reputation of President Carter is declining pari passu. The dollar's simpage has gone beyond these Lit's lubricating adjustments envisioned by the free floaters. This is not to say that the central broks should suddenly reverse their policy and attempt to per the dollar. It is to say that samething is very wrong. And that President Carter, as chief spokerman for the United States, can hardly be said to have diagnosed it. What one hears about Mr. Carter from anonymous men of affairs, in business, in diplomacy, in letters, was said rather straightforwardly by ro less than the Shah of Iran, himself a friend of Mr. Carter, although whether he is also an admirer is another otestion.

The interview was with Jonathan Randal of The Washington Post, and the Shah was going on about submarines he had ordered from European countries, and frigates, and this & that, when apropos a question about the US. policy toward the Horn of Africa, which policy was only describable by Art Buchwald or Rube Goldberg, the Shah made "a series of pessimistic remarks about the U.S. world role since what he called the 'trauma of Vietram and Watergate."

No Fortress

"You have no policy any-where," said the Shah, quite accurately. "You only react when something happens. The other side is planning something for fifty years [from now]. If the West wants to die slowly that is your business . . . There is no such thing as a Fortress Amer-

This is the publicly-uttered opinion of a man whose king 2000 abuts Soviet territory, and who has spent many hours in the company of President Carter in the past few weeks. What clearly he would like to see is a certain assertiveness by the United States. What form might it take?

 Subject to a plebiscite, an Immediate recognition of the new government of Rhcdesia, followed by a termination of sanctions and easy credit on sales for defensive purposes.

• The promulgation of a Manhattan - Project - Moon - Landing scale enterprise designed to tap the commercial energy potential of the atom. The participation of the top nuclear scientists in the world should be solicited, and the information developed released instantly to every country upon a convincing showing that that · Instant deregulation of oil and gas sales in America combined with a discriminatory tariff against OPEC oil based on estimates as to the extent of the gouge by each country (a higher tariff, in other words, on $12 oil that costs 18c to bring up from the ground, compared to . $12 oil that costs $5 to bring up).

· A five-year business tax immunity—Puerto Rico style—for U.S. companies that invest abroad in these countries that permit the repairiation of profits.

• The suspension of SALT talks and all economic exchange and credits with the Soviet Union until all foreign military carsonnal have been withchawn from Africa Meanwhile the rescheduling of the B-1 bomber, the development of the new cruise missile with increased range, and the production of the neutron bomb.

Now not even the Shah of Iran would welcome all these developments. But he would uncerstand them; and certainly, so to speak, the United States would be reborn, the dollar would get up off the floor, swagger over to the bar, and buy a round of drinks for the visiting Swiss, Garman, Jap, and Dutchman. And in Geneva, undressing to go to bed after a fumultuous day st time UN, the paumeny French andbassader would ask his wife absemimindedly could she remenber exactly how it went, the soul they used to sing . the cost that begins with the words, "O zay cahn yoo zee? . . By Carole Shifrin
WASHINGTON, March 16 (WP).—Eastern Afrlines has ten-tatively decided to go forward with the acquisition of 23 Airbus A300B wide-body planes produced by Airbus Industrie, a consortium of firms of five European nations.

The proposed acquisition, to be presented to Eastern's board of directors and major lenders over the next three weeks, would mark the first major purchase of the European plane by a U.S. airline. ary from the previous monthly peak of $816 million in January. In a presentation to the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday on Eastern's financial woes of the Pinance Ministry officials said past and its progress of the last Net foreign selling of Japanese stocks in the month fell from few years, Frank Borman, Eastern's chairman and president, said the four A300Bs Bastern has been flying since November under an unusual six-month lease agreement have been operationally

Cost to Britain Of Being in EEC Set at £1 Billion

LONDON, March 16 (Reuters).—British membership in the Common Market is currently costing the balance of payments about £1 billion a year, according to an assessment by the Cambridge economic policy group. In an article released ahead of their annual economic review, the group says British food prices are about 12 per cent higher than they would be if Britain had not joined the EEC.

Agriculture Minister John Silkin commented that any estimate of the balance of payments or food price impact of EEC membership must be speculative, but gave guarded support to the estimate. "I would not radically dissent from the orders of magnitude suggested for 1978, given present community and world price levels," he said in a statement.

LONDON, March 16 (AP-DJ).— in Tokyo of 232.30 yen, the dollar required strong support from the Bank of Japan, which bought an estimated $510 million and was believed to have instructed the New York Federal Reserve Bank to act on its behalf later in the

By the end of European dealings, the U.S. fund was at a new low of 232.15 yen, down 65 from its overnight rate.

The Japanese government appears to have little confidence in the capital control measures announced yesterday as a means of holding the dollar steady. Minister of International Trade and Industry Toshio Komoto said in Tokyo that the measures are insufficient.

Dealers said this selling in Japan touched off a further weakening of the dollar in Europe. Volume was not unduly heavy, but conditions were nervous and were made even more tense by the Mideast situation. Central banks in Europe were not, it appears, aggressively supporting the U.S.

Against the deutsche mark, the dollar dropped to 2.0245 marks from 2.0492 marks late yesterday. The U.S. unit fell even more sharply against the Swiss franc at 1,8775 francs from 1.9370 francs. The French franc continued to firm ahead of the weekend election. The dollar slipped to 4.6945 francs from 4.7315 francs.

Sterling rose to $1.9158 from $1.9072 and the dollar also lost ground against the guilder, lira and Belgian franc.

LONDON, March 16 (AP-DJ). -The Bank of England announced today that the broadly based sterling M-3 money supply rose f490 million, or just over 1 per cent, in the month ended Feb. 15.

This makes an increase of about 12 per cent in the M-3 money supply in the first 10 months of the year ending in mid-April, the bank said.

It said the money supply had increased at a 14.75-per-cent annual rate in those 10 months. The government had hoped to keep money-supply growth in a 9 to 13-per-cent target range for the year ending mid-April

Wharton School Sees Better U.S. Trade Data

Carter's Failure on Inflation

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, March 16 (WP).-"Inflation," says the nation's chief wage-price watchdog. Barry Bosworth, "just will not take care of itself." That may prove a fitting epitaph to the Carter administration's moribund anti-inflation

If there is a single dramatic failure of the Carter administration so far, it has been its inability to grapple with rising prices. Perhaps more than anything else-more than the absence of a believable energy program—Mr. Carter's lackluster leadership on the anti-inflation front has been responsible for the tumbling dollar. At the final pre-inaugural meeting of his economic advisers in Plains, Ga., in December, 1976, Mr. Carter may have given away the ball game by abandoning the notion of anything as mild fear, then, was that even a gentle hand to moderate wage and price increases would shatter Bert Lance was ruling the roost at that time, espousing the philosophy, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." Even liberal economic adviser Charles Schultze thought the economy could be pushed forward for a year or so without rekin-dling inflation. The key fact that Mr. Carter must come to grips with is that in his administration the declining trend of inflation from 1975 to 1976 was reversed in 1977, and threatens to go higher. And unless Mr. Carter takes some decisive action now to slow rising prices in 1978, the nation will enter a highly active collective bargaining year in 1979 with an inflationary spiral at high momentum. And just look at what lies ahead: There is the prospect of ever higher energy prices, including coal and natural gas, Dollar depreciation raises the costs of a whole range of imported goods. Moreover, inflationary pressures are touched off by restrictive trade quotas, minimum prices for steel, the cargo preference system, new minimum wages, farm support legislation and last, but not least, by sharply higher social security taxes-all actions initiated or supported by Mr. Carter.

The times cry out for a stronger anti-inflationary guide to the private sector than Mr. Carter has been willing to risk. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York-surely no radical institution-recently observed that some means of breaking the deeply entrenched wage-price spiral is needed, adding: "It is the basic appeal of incomes policies that they might provide a means of doing so. So all we have got left is the administration's plea to business and labor to decelerate wage and price increases by one-half point a year The only new thing on the horizon, insiders say, "hetter advertising" of this wet-noodle initiative. So batten down the hatches, folks-the worst is yet to come.

Output and Inventories Gain in U.S. in Month

WASHINGTON, March 16 IHT) .- Industrial production in the United States rose 0.5 per cen. in February, reversing a revised 0.8-per-cent drop in January, the Federal Reserve Board reported today.

In another report, the Commerce Department said business inventories rose by 0.7 per cent. or $2.17 billion, in January.

The increase in production put the index at 139.2 per cent of its 1967 average, or 4.5 per cent ahead of February, 1977. The January decline had criginally been reported as 0.7 per

The Pebruary gain in output was the strongest since the 0.7per-cent increase last July.

The board said the increase came despite the fact that output was restrained by severe weather in some regions and by limitation on electric power use due to dwindling coal supplies in some states. The board estimated the

Bundesbank said in its latest monthly report. "Put this is the price that must be paid in orde, to assure the most liberal possible international capital flows, and thus contribute to the maintenance of liberal foreign trade," the Bundesbank stressed

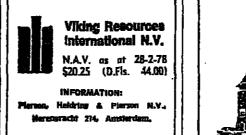

In its March report, the Bundesbank said that despite measures taken in mid-December raising reserve requirements on banks, foreign liabilities, shortterm capital continued to pour into Germany through other channels at the end of 1977 and the beginning of 1978.

Net short-term foreign liabilities of German banks rose 4.4 billion marks in the fourth quarter of 1977 after rising 11 billion marks in the period from the beginning of 1976 through September 1977. This rise added sharply to the intervention requirements of the central bank an was a major reason for the restrictions imposed in mid-December, the report said.

Net foreign assets of the Bundesbank rose 11.3 billion marks in the fourth quarter, after increasing by only 8 billion marks in the precedin, seven

Suez Group Has Profit

PARIS, March 16 (AP-DJ) .-Cie. Financière de Suez, holding company of a major French banking group, posted a net profit for 1977 of 171.39 million francs, little changed from the 169.47 million francs posted for 1976.

The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is our policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and bank notes, money market transactions and precious metals. Geographically, too, we work mainly in areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A. (our U.S. affiliate, Republic National Bank of New York, is now one of America's 60 largest banks). It also includes countries which, frankly, many other banks lack the first-hand knowledge to tackle properly. What's more, we keep our back-office systems running abreast of our business. You don't notice this directly, but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors.

Serving our clients well has helped us grow uncommonly fast. Today, we're big enough to provide most of the sophisticated facilities of the international banking giants but lean enough not to keep you waiting for decisions.

As part of the Trade Development Bank Holding Group ($ 3.6 billion in assets; $ 327.4 million in capital and loan funds employed, as of June 30, 1977), we're ready to serve you in most of the world's financial centers.

Key Group offices: Geneva, London, Paris, New York (Republic National Bank of New York). Other offices in Beirut, Bogotá, Buenos Aires, Caracas, Chiasso, Frankfurt, Luxembourg, Mexico City, Montevideo, Nassau, Panama City, Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, Tokyo.

IC Industries builds 1977 net income 29% higher than record year, 1976.

Our first decade of diversification was completed in 1977 with new records in both sales and carnings. In 1968, a $300 million regional railroad became IC Industries. Today, ten years later, we're a $1.9 billion international multibusiness corporation.

Record year for net income per common share and sales, too.

Net income grew 29 percent in 1977 to $78.5 million. Net income per common share jumped 27 percent to $4.55, nearly a dollar greater than 1976. Sales were nearly $200 million greater than 1976.

Our Midas International Corporation opened its 1000th automotive shop in 1977. And Midas sales were three times greater than when the company joined IC Industries in 1972. Midas and the soft drink companies in our Consumer Products Group topped $430 million in sales in 1977, up 17 percent from 1976.

We acquired Stanray Corporation in 1977, an important addition to the continuing growth of IC Industries. Stanray a major producer of railroad equipment, aviation products and fluid power components, joined Abex Corporation in our Commercial Products Group. Commercial Products achieved record sales of $638 million in 1977. Up 11 percent from 1976.

Rail Transportation Group improves by $11.6 million.

Yes, it was a very good year. Our Transportation Group earned a pre-tax income of $5.1 million in comparison to a $6.5 million pre-tax loss in 1976. An improvement of $11.6 million.

We're working to make record years a tradition at IC Industries. That's how we've grown from a $300 million regional railroad to a $1.9 billion international multibusiness corporation in just 10 years.

If you'd like to know more about why IC Industries keeps sounding like a broken record, write us: IC Industries. Inc., European Office, 55, chemin Moise Duboule, Petit Saconnex, CH-1211 Geneva 28, Switzerland.

BOOKS

THE PLAGUE DOGS

By Richard Adams. Alfred A. Knopf. 390 pp. Mustrated. $10.95.

Reviewed by John Leonard

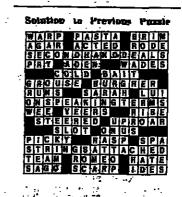

JUST who does Richard Adams think he is? The author of "Watership Down" and "Shardik" seems this time to think he is a combination of Hannah Arendt and Sir Walter Scott, or Jean-Paul Sartre and Anthony Trollope, or B. F. Skinner and Hugh Walpole, or ... enough.

On the one hand, "The Plague On the one hand, "The Plague Dogs" fairly reeks of literary self-consciousness. In the grand manner of the English novel, it is discursive and coy. It pauses every 12 pages for an afflatus or a tantrum or a pun. It is not above stooping to doggerel and parody. It is full of references to Shakespeare, Blake Wordsworth, T. S. Eliot and William Golding, not to mention such popular entertainers as Gilbert and Sullivan, Garry Trudeau and Michael Korda. It begins with an epigraph from Thucydides, in Greek. It ends happily, falsely, arbitrarily—because, says Adams, that's how we want our books to end.

On the other hand, "The Plague Dogs" must carry around a big load of philosophical heavy water. It is a polemic on the nature of freedom and illusion, the confusion between objective and subjective states of reality, the meaning of Auschwitz and the iniquities of modern science. Thus the tables are turned. If C. P. Snow could suggest that the literary sensibility was somehow responsible for Auschwitz, Adams, like an enraged, late-blooming Leavisite, responds that, on the contrary, the scientific mind was at fault.

And then, as if literature and philosophy were not enough to worry about, Adams complicates his task by setting his story in the English Lake District, on the Scottish border, where Geordie is spoken. Geordie is a dialect, part English and part Scandinavian, taking two forms: Upper Tyneside and North Lancashire. Adams uses both. The result is passages of this sort: "Over to Eshd'i. Bootterliket ground—sy. Noo whisht a bit! Haald on!"

Adams is showing off. What have we? Two dogs escape from a laboratory that ex-periments on animals. Snitter is a small fox terrier who once had kind master. Rowf is a big black mongrel who has always ligent, but hallucinates because his brain has been operated on Rowf is brave, but afraid of water because the scientists have been trying to drown him. Dialect notwithstanding, Rowf sounds like Gary Cooper in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," while Saitter sounds like Lear's fool, Larinir Madison in "Barbary Shore" and . R. D. Laing at home.

They prey by night on sheep, chickens and garbage cans. They discuss dog's duty to man. They discover that to survive in their freedom they must be cruel. They are assisted in the "wild" by a roguish fox, a kind of Machiavelli. They are hunted at first by farmers and then—after a newspaper report that they are infected with bubonic plague— by almost everybody, including the police and the army.

Aspects of "The Plague Dogs" are quite wonderful. The group dynamics of the fox and the two dogs are shrewd, especially in opposition to the group dynamics of the scientists. Adams writes about nature as well as D. H. Lawrence did, even though he knows it and does too much of it. And, as every reader of "Watership Down" is aware he is uncanny at making us believe that animals think and feel precisely the way he says they do. Snitter, remembering cities, houses, lamp posts, finds the wilderness unnatural, man-made for mysterious man-purposes. He explains that headlights on cars are "pieces of old moons... Once the moon gets too full somebody-some man or other-goes up every day and slices bits off one side ... until there isn't any more, and then after a hit a new one grows. Men do that with all sorts of things, actually rose bushes, for instance." Very nice and witty.

But too often the wit gets squeezed by the bulge of prose, by Hecate and Pan, Socrates and Jesus. Cuteness swarms: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of Sir Ivor Stone's emissary!" Or: "Now leave we to speak of Digby Driver and turn we unto Snitter and Rowf." Snitter must think, "There's more in this than meets the nose," and Snitter must say. "That remark's in very poor smell." Adams even ends up with some characters talking about Richard Adams. Poor smell.

And portentousness. Of course, all the experiments in the aniuseless, as if medicine didn't exist. And if we don't get the Nazi point immediately—The monkeys' gas chamber"—it will te labored: One of the few people to be kind to Snitter will be Jew whose family perished in a : the war; one of the scientists. will have experimented at . Auschwitz Smugness obtains. And contempt. Adams's oddly sexiess world is full of contempt ... for science, for politics, for journalism. What is so far missing from that world are the marvelous people who came along with the discursive style in the great English novels he cannibalizes. I finished "Watership Down" in tears at the death of Hazel, the warrior-rabbit, 1 : finished "The Plague Dogs" dryfinished The riague was eyed, having been manipulated.

Europe's Rough Ways Teach a Distant Lesson

By Rob Hughes

LONDON, March 16 (IHT).-Is there a better tomorrow for world soccer?

To judge by feelings in two soccer capitals almost 6,000 miles apart, the answer is negative. Latin American touch skills versus European physical and tactical application has long been the great divide, but a week at Brazil's training camp, abruptly followed by a return to London to the echoes of outrage over the brutal play of an Italian under-21 team a week ago, confirms the Brazil is, under its new coach, Claudio Coutinho, fast learning the lessons of European soccer. The inclination of its players and people remains on the side of individual flair, but Coutinho is determinedly steering the World Cup squad toward greater physical conditioning and stern tactisai nianning.

A former physical education officer in the army, Coutinho has for years studied the trends of Europe. As he pushes Brazil toward these strengths-and since Brazil is undoubtedly the major South American hope in the next World Cup-neither Coutinho nor other national coaches there will ignore the signs for the future in Europe.

Importance Emphasized

That is why the cynical performance of the young Italians -and the manner in which both Italian and English national coaches respond-is of greater than normal significance. If, in the second leg of this European championship fixture in Rome on April 5, England attempts to retaliate in kind, or if Italy repeats the apparent foul edge of its play in Manchester, then a new escalation of overphysical attritional soccer could follow. Peter Barnes, the most exciting English winger for a decade, a young man who had already ridden some fierce Italian defending at World Cup level, describes the treatment at Manchester as "the worst experience I've had. My nose is busted and my legs are covered in plaster."

Fear and Sensitivity

That was a week ago. The news of the match didn't penetrate the Brazil camp, yet the players there remain, as they have since the disgraceful kicking of Pele in the 1966 World Cup, alert, a little afraid and certainly sensitive to the physical side of European play. There are, however, a new breed of Brazilians determined to meet fire with fire coincides with the return Italy-England under-21 match, the mood will not be lost on them.

What, then, can anyone do about the ill-feeling that festers after the 25 Italian fouls in Manchester? Euzo Bearzot, the Italian manager, has called for the television film of the game, which Italy lost, 2-1. He has already been told, by Gigi Peronace major efforts for 30 years have icism of foul tactics that night Bearzot, a diplomat if ever soccer had one, says the reports disturb him. He says Italian soccer is glited enough to play without cynicism and he claims he is leading the country away from the harsh defensive era. He even infers he will rid the game in Rome of any repetition of

British and Italian soccer—that

Denomiced at Home

One wonders how. Bearzot is a persuasive talker, yet his words of sporting bonhomie do not square with the blatant tackles of Romeo Benetti, whom even Italians call "assassing" or of Marco Tardelli in the World Cup matches. Nor does his "attacking" preaching seem to filter to the Italian league where, a month ago, a full program produced a meager nine goals.

We must try to be fair, to accept Bearzot at his word. Yet under-21 performance a week ago came as no surprise to those of us who watched the same team play a "friendly" against the English second-division club Luton Town last January.

Italy that night was not brutal, but its tactics were utterly cynical, built around the indomitably boring Catenaccio defense, interested principally in survival. Although the Italians did score a which suggested Bearzot is right in his contention that their skills are fast and sharp, they slumped back to achieve the 1-1 draw that seemed their sole pur-

Against the Grain

If Bearzot is sincere in his entertaining ideals, he still has to cut deeply against the grain of Italian thinking. The British, we must admit, are no angels-and that is precisely the danger of the return leg in Rome. Under its previous administration, England was often negative and occasionally crude, and Scotland's tackling of the Czechoslovakian winger Marian Masny in a World Cup encounter last fall is still a source of

Add to that the accelerating number of young players disci-plined across the board by EUFA in the last year, and the picture is a disturbing one of increasingly violent play. When the players of the next

A cossible explanation, I suppose, is that, in an age when the (ashion is to be in love with yourself, confessing to being in love with somebody else is an admission of unfaithfulness to one's beloved. The truth is probatly more complicated. Consider, for example, the situ-

NUEW YORK.—I heard of a man their "relationship" is. Ed and 'N and woman recently who had Jane do not dream of living happily ever after. They are more like the Bell Telephone System. They aspire to heavy communicating in a fulfilling relationship.

In fact, they are probably afraid of falling in love; and if, in spite of everything, they nevertheless do fall in love, they are too embarrassed to tell anybody. Why? One reason is that it is such an out-of-date thing to do. Falling in love is not scientific. It cannot be described in the brain-numbing jargon of socioiogy. It can only be described in the words of songwriters. People in Cole Porter's songs were always falling in love, and worse, talking Falling in love is archaic, like cookouts and tall fins on your Plymouth. Communicating, relating, experiencing fulfilling relationships—these are what up-todate boys and girls engage in.

When disaster strikes, it is not "the end of a love affair" to make them blue, but "the destruction of our relationship" to make them yearn for new "therapeutic ex-

This grotesque terminology in which Americans now discuss what used to be called affairs of the heart is curious not only for its comic pseudoscientific sound, but also for the coolness with which it treats a passion formerly associated with heat!

The way people talk, of course. reflects the way they think, and this avoidance of the language of love probably reflects a wish to avoid the consuming singleminded commitment to love to which the old words led, often no doubt to the dismay of people who uttered them. Why in our time we should tread so gingerly to avoid commitment to love to the second party is the subject for a monograph.

Whatever the explanation, it is bleak era for love, which makes it a time of dull joys, small-bore agonies and thin passions. "I could not love thee, dear, so much, lov'd I not honor more," the poet once could write. Today he could only say. "I could not have so fulfilling a relationship with thee, dear, had I not an even more The knights and dames of the Matoufe Society, who formed their group, with ceremony, 18 years ago in Marche-en-Famenne, Belgium.

The 100-odd knights and demes are credited with one major feat: They have saved from oblivion a delicious morsel known as the matoure and almost succeeded in restoring it to its original glory, at least here in the foothills of the Ardennes. From the days when the town was marked on Gallo-Roman road maps as Vala in Pago Falminiensi Cita Marca until well into the pre-World War I days, the Ardennes wood-choppers were so poor that they couldn't afford to butter their

A Substitute

As a substitute they used matoute, and a man of the 1970s finds it somewhat difficult to feel sorry for them, at least on that account. It is somewhat of a parallel to a one-time British ruling that dammhands and fishing-boat crews could only be fed oysters so many days a week. There was a similar Swedish clause limiting the consumption of salmon.

The matoure is made from eggs, flour, milk and lean pork. "It isn't a pancake," explained Jacques Rossignon, cor-respondent for the newspaper La Meuse in Liège and a member of the honorable society. "It isn't an omelet. It is a . . .

Despite Activities

Despite 17 years of promotional activities by the knights and dames of the society, the makenie hasn't gathered much ground beyond the Ardennes footbills, and chances are it will take some time before it becomes a standard dish on menu cards in, say, Brussels, Liège and Antwerp. That is a shame; it can be eaten separately with gray rye on the side and it ought to be an ideal starter for almost any kind of a distinguished main course.

"We are working on it," said Mr. Rossignon, "but the Belgians are a conservative lot. Once a dish has been labeled 'poor man's food' it becomes a no-no on more genteel tables. But we shall overcome . . . The recipe is simple:
